Note Photoshop is a registered trademark of Adobe, the owner of this book. ## Photoshop Keyboard Shortcuts Photoshop is a pixel-based image editor, where a pixel is the smallest unit of image data. To edit a single pixel in an image, you must select that pixel. You then perform your editing on the selected pixels, and the result is applied to all selected pixels in the image. To select a pixel, you use the cursor. For example, with the cursor over a particular pixel, you can double-click to select that pixel, or you can press the Spacebar. It doesn't matter which way you click and it doesn't matter if you click more than once. The first click selects that pixel; any other clicks after the first click do nothing. Once the pixel is selected, you can perform any editing task on that pixel. Photoshop was designed primarily as a graphics program, which is why so many people understand Photoshop's common editing tools. The traditional and most used tools are the Brush, Eraser, Pencil, and Paint tools. There are many shortcuts that you can use to perform common Photoshop editing tasks with less effort. ## The Image Editor's toolbox You've already seen many of the traditional tools in this book. In this section, you'll see two sets of tools that are new to this book and to Photoshop itself.

Succorinferring the Biological Functions of ECM-Associated/Interacting Proteins in Cancer: Additional Therapeutic Targets. ECM-associated/interacting proteins (EAPs) of EAPs have been identified and characterized as integral molecules that are associated with cancer ECMs, which might become indispensable therapeutic targets. The role of each EAP is no doubt indispensable. However, several EAPs still remain to be investigated. Here, we focus on EAPs that play diverse roles in cancer progression and discuss their potential therapeutic effects. Herein, we will review and discuss (1) the characteristic and biological functions of protein-protein interactions between EAPs and the ECM, (2) the characteristic and biological functions of EAPs anchored at the cell surface, and (3) the potential therapeutic effects of targeting EAPs. The discovery of the novel functions of EAPs should impact cancer therapeutic approaches.Q: query string escape in play framework 2.2.1 In play framework 2.2.1, how to escape query string key? return ok.find("task").where().eq("id", 1).findList(); error message: [error] bad escape character - " was expecting ' '... error message with " return ok.find("task").where().eq("id", 1).findList(); error message: [error] bad escape character - " was expecting " error message with htmlEncode() return ok.find("task").where().eq("id", 1).findList().map { case r.Body -> "" case _ -> r.Body } error message: [error] bad escape character - " was expecting ' ' error message with URLEncode() return ok.find("task").where().eq("id", 1).findList().map { case r.Body -> r.Body.replace("\ ", "") case _ -> r.Body } error message: [error] bad escape character - " was expecting '\' error message with URLEncode() In real project, one of my route may look like: return
